

Pet Care NOTES

Presented by Tracy A. Barlup,
VMD
and associates

IS YOUR PET IN PAIN?

It is heartbreaking to see your pet in pain. In addition, veterinary experts have come to learn that pain management is an important part of keeping pets healthy and less stressed, which will ultimately help them live long and happy lives. Since your pet obviously can't tell you when he or she is in pain, note a pet that is unusually quiet, whining, or whimpering. Constantly licking a part of the body, seeking more affection (or being aggressive) than usual, or flattening the ears against the head can all be signs of pain. Talk with your veterinarian about determining the cause of the pain and how you can help your pet deal with it.

There's no doubt about it—cats and dogs are special creatures that make us laugh and generally add so much to our enjoyment of life. Take care of this special friend by providing a loving environment, playthings, exercise opportunities, a nutritious diet, and protection from hazards of all kinds. We'll provide the medical care as well as advise you on ways to keep your pet healthy and happy. Our state of the art facilities offer the utmost in compassionate care including at-home and in-office pain management. For more information or to schedule an appointment, please visit our website. We also carry a complete line of high quality pet foods, vitamins, flea & tick prevention products, and grooming products.

FACT: Pay careful attention to your pet's mobility to see if he or she is in pain.

Presented by Tracy A. Barlup, V.M.D., and associates

www.longmeadowvet.com

For more information, to schedule an appointment, or for archived articles, visit our website.

Please e-mail any questions or comments to:

info@longmeadowvet.com

Longmeadow Animal Hospital
19764 Longmeadow Rd., Hagerstown
301-733-8400

10142819